

OUR GUIDES

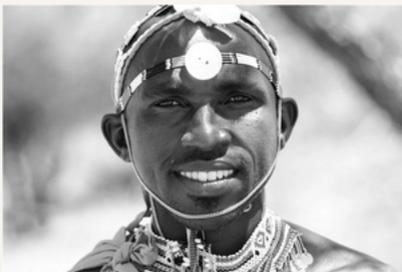

Gabriel Ewoi - Head Guide

Gabriel worked with Kerry at Ewaso River Camel Hikes and Sabuk for many years. His first job was tending to the pet guinea fowls as a young boy. He worked his way up through the ranks quickly eventually becoming an excellent guide with Karisia Walking Safaris. He has been a walking guide for 15 years and has been on various courses in Kenya to further his knowledge. In 2016 Gabriel went with Kerry Glen on an Advanced Rifle Training course in South Africa. In 2017 he became a Wilderness First Responder. Gabriel has walked through many parts of Kenya and knows Laikipia and northern Kenya very well.

James Ntiemu

Ntiemu introduces himself by his other name James, especially when concerned that the speaker might have trouble saying Ntiemu. Ntiemu is a sharp Leopard spotter and has eyes that seem to possess an xray quality piercing even the thickest bush to point out an animal within. Ntiemu is also a great climbing guide, an accomplished Elephant whisperer and is rifle trained.

Paul Lemanyass

Paul is the son of one of our best trackers, Shillingi a very well known naturalist and bushman within Laikipia. Shillingi passed on his love of nature to Paul who has excelled not only in the large mammals his dad so loves but also the small creatures including the insects, plants, reptiles and birds. Paul is also one of our rock climbing guides and has become very able climber and teacher.

Andrew Lekaal

Andrew is an excellent naturalist as well as an excellent communicator about Massai culture and what it has been like growing up in Laikipia. Andrew studied tourism but it is his bush skills that shine brightest when you are walking with him. The Acacia bushlands, the riverine forests and the grasslands that define Laikipia are far richer in species than one might suspect. Andrew excels at finding some of our most obscure species. Not only Andrew an excellent birdwatcher but also a very accomplished naturalist.

Kerry Glen

Kerry was born in Kenya and grew up accompanying her family on safaris all over East Africa. Kerry's father is the sculptor Robert Glen and many of the family expeditions revolved around studying the biology and design of the animals they encountered. At the University of Cape Town, Kerry continued to pursue her interests in the natural world, studying Environmental and Geographical Sciences. Back in Kenya, Kerry designed, built and managed the renowned lodge, Sabuk. Also in Laikipia she guided walking safaris with Sabuk and Ewaso River Camel Hikes for eight years leading clients through some of the most stunning and rugged country in Kenya. Kerry is a Wilderness First Responder

James Christian

James has travelled extensively through Africa pursuing adventure as well as his interests in ecology, photography and fishing. As a kid, accompanying safaris arranged by his Kenyan raised mum, Anthea Christian, James developed a passion for wildlife and ecology. James studied Wildlife Biology at The University of Vermont and after University worked as a biologist, predominantly with endangered birds. During this time James shot motion picture film of wildlife that he sold to Television programs like Public Television's program, NATURE. James is also a Wilderness First Responder
