MAASAI TRIBE

In addition to the beautiful scenery, archaeological wealth and abundant wildlife, Ngorongoro Conservation Area is also blessed with people – the Maasai – a pastoral tribe with a traditional way of life allowing them to live in harmony with the wildlife and the environment. Approximately 100,000 Maasai live in the conservation area today tending their livestock without harming wildlife.

The Maasai settle in circular-shaped villages, called boma. They are made up of huts called manyatas, which are made with bricks of materials such as adobe, straw, mud and animal dung. These components give impermeability to the walls and roof. The huts usually do not have windows but do have small skylights to let in a little light.

CORPORATE SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

The Hotel Sustainability Programme will be aligned with the corporate values of Melia Hotels International and will be offered to travellers with an interest in this part of the world as a fundamental attribute and key selling point. The company has designed a renovation project that pays special attention to protecting the natural environment, preserving culture, waste management and energy efficiency.

With a modern infrared system, the hotel manages energy consumption in the heat transmission of the machines making each of them 90% self-sufficient. In addition, 95% of the products used in the property are Km0, acquired in villages nearby. Following the example of the other properties in Tanzania, Ngorongoro Lodge will produce its own water for human consumption through a bottling plant that will process local water and void the use of plastic transportation.

- Reduce in-room electrical equipment.
- Produce on site drinking water (still & sparkling).
- Implement the reduced usage of paper through a digital experience for guests.
- Use of Km 0 products at all F&B outlets to support local communities.
- Employment of local Maasai tribe members and promote the Maasai heritage from within the lodge.
- Lodge décor sourced locally through local Maasai tribes and local companies.
- Collaboration with Moshi based NGO – Born to Learn, which has a school for the children of the area and their families.

The Meliá Collection is a group of exclusive hotels whose uniqueness, personality and strong local roots are their key value proposition. Ngorongoro Crater is a once-in-a lifetime natural disaster that evolve into a breathtaking experience creating a home for animals and people.
