

KINARA

Kosher stays in the Maasai Mara

At Kinara, we believe a safari should feel unhurried, personal, and true to the people who make the journey. We have welcomed kosher groups to the Mara before, and we take care to understand and respect what matters to each of them.

Planning together

A good stay begins well before arrival. The earlier we hear from you, the more thoughtfully we can prepare. We'd ask you to share your group's needs with us as early as possible, so that meals, timings and arrangements in camp are in place before you step out into the Mara.

Kitchen arrangements

On request, we can set aside a separate kitchen for your group, prepared with kosher utensils. Please note that our kitchens do not have separate stoves or ovens. We'll gladly talk through the details with you so you can plan with confidence.

Bringing your own chef

Groups are welcome to bring their own kosher chef, who can work alongside our team in camp.

Families and friends

Kinara welcomes kosher family and friendship groups of all kinds, whether you are celebrating a milestone, reuniting across generations, or simply sharing the wild together.
