

KINARA

The Mara, shared with everyone

Kinara means "Bearer of Light" and light falls on every guest in the same way. Our camp is on the banks of the Mara River and open to all, whatever your abilities or needs. We are glad to support People of Determination wherever we can, and our team is always close at hand.

Tell us what matters to your stay before you arrive. We will listen and shape the details around you.

A camp felt through every sense

The Maasai Mara is not only something to be seen. At Kinara, the Mara River is close enough to hear. Water moves over stones through the day, and at dusk the low call of hippos drifts up from the banks.

The trees around camp hold their own scent, warm and resinous after the afternoon sun. Even the air feels different here: clean, open and softly fragrant with grass.

Moving through camp

Our main pathways and shared spaces are accessible, so you can move between arrival, lounges, dining and wellness with ease. For suites set further from reception, golf carts are on hand to carry you to and from your door.

Dedicated accessible suites can be arranged on request and prepared around your requirements.
